

Family Feud

Instructions:

- Step 1: Divide everyone into two teams of equal number, and have each team select a team captain.
- Step 2: Ask each team captain to come to the front of the room (have a bell or signaling device for each team).
- Step 3: The host reads off the first question.
- Step 4: The team captains face off by trying to signal first. The team captain who signals first has five seconds to give an answer that is listed on the Family Feud questions and answers sheet. If the first team captain fails to give a correct answer, the other team captain gets a chance to guess.
- Step 5: The team whose captain gives a correct answer first gets the chance to play this round of the game. If they don't want to, they can pass the chance to play the round to the opposing team.
- Step 6: The team who chooses to play this round gets a chance to guess the remaining top answers to the question. Each team member gets a chance to give an answer, one by one, until they've found all the answers or gotten three wrong answers. The team gets three strikes during the round, and each incorrect answer given counts as one strike. When the team gives a correct answer, the host adds the correct number of points (Note for hosts: the correct points for each answer are listed in parentheses next to the answer).
- Step 7: When the team uses up their three strikes, the turn is passed to the second team. The second team gets one chance to give one of the top answers to the question. If they succeed, they will steal all the other team's points from that round and win the round. If the opposing team fails, the first team keeps their points for that round.
- Step 8: This is the end of the first round. At the end of the round, the host should add up each team's points and write them on the scorecard. To begin the second round, a new member from each team must come up to the front of the room and prepare to answer the next question, and steps 3-7 are repeated.
- Step 9: End of the game is when the host runs out of questions or time.
